The letter also stated that R K Dickinson, hying near Huntaville, had died from the offects of a wound he (a citizen, not a soldier.) co-ceived at the hands of the Yankee-last summer, while he was on a visit to Fayetteville. The breath was scarcely one of his body, before eight men, dressed to Confederate uniform, entered the premises and drave off his cattle pursuit—and a meeting of citizens at Visions, Madison county, had appointed ten myn, and sent them in pursuit. The letter gives no cline to this saystory. We are, therefore, left to con-jecture that the raidors were F-decals disguised Confederate uniform, or desertors from the
